matter by one vote as was then proposed. If Whittemore desired to back down from the consequences of his-own report, as would seem from his voting for this resolution, let. him do so, but not in that way. He had said to the Democratic gentlemen on the back seats that they would wake up some fine morning and fine the whole investigating arrangement up in a balloon, and the morning had at last come. The investigators had made a great parade, and go: up a primer which had cost the State at least $20,000; every Democratic paper in the State had quoted it, and talked about it; they had charged scott, Parker, himself and others with all manner of stealing and rascallty, and then after all they proposed by one vote to hush it all up. It was cowardly and confemptible. It would have been more manly in them to have come out and told the truth—that they were ashamed of the whole thing, and wanted to undo the blunder as far as they could. He had been abused, villified, iled about in all manner of ways about his connection with the land commission, and then they wanted to back down from their own statements; but he knew there was not a senator who could rise in his place and accuse him of anything dishonorable, unless he lied; and the senator that had done so was a sneaking coward if he did not hold up to his own 100 140,937 100 140,079 10 140,108 - 50 140,024 10 140,245 10 140,296 100 140,317 25 140,341 10 140,426 10 140,426 10 140,689 10 146,861 25 148 194 10 148,013 10 148,079 10 | 140, 412 10 | 140, 689 60 | 140, 713 10 | 140, 733 50 | 140, 844 500 | 141, 199 10 | 141, 131 10 | 141, 131 10 | 141, 219 10 | 141, 399 25 | 141, 359 10 | 141, 692 25 | 141, 715 50 | 141, 715 100 148,837 100 148,862 50 148,85 10 148,95 10 149,047 10 149,144 10 149,191 10 149,101 10 149,279 25 149,379 10 142,259 10 142,213 and the senator that had done so was a sneak-ing coward if he did not hold up to his own allegations. He had never taken that role but there were some who had, and who then wanted to back down from the tumuit they had themselves raised. The Republican party was in power, and grave all legations had been made against it, and then an effort meant, it it meant anything, that the Republican party was powerless to correct its own abusel, and he had a strong presentiment that that was the truth, but he didn't think that was the truth, but he didn't think that was the way to do it. They had dragged the animal out before the world, and now they wanted to cover him up and hide him, but they couldn't do it. The animal was too itvely and we was scratching and biling too hard. too lively and we was scratching and bling too hard. No man could tread on the tail of his coat in reterence to the land commission. He might have done mean things in that office, and he had done some things that he would not do again, but he had not done any thing improper or dishonorable. They had got to back down on that proposition. He was awfully strong on that point, and mighty independent too, and he called upon the Democratic gentlemen in the back seats to know if he were not spunky then, if he were not independent, and if he were the man who had shown himself a coward.

Mr. Nash then withdrew his motion. He said he did so to allow Mr. Leslie to explain about his land commission business. He didn't object to those explanations, only they were rather monotonous, and the Senate had been entertained with them for the last three years. He didn't believe in investigating committees, anyway. Leslie had had one himself that cost the State five or six hundred dollars, and had only produced a little bit of a primer. Then there was the committee to investigate the Third Congressional District. That had cost the State twenty-seven thousand dollars, and they had said that was all right, because it would be a good campaign documen; but he hadu't seen more than one or two fellows going into the campaign with its report under their arms, and they didn't understand it. Then there were the "high joints." What that committee had cost the State nobody knew but "Kimpton, and he wouldn't tell. They had, to be sure, made grave charges against Lestle, and he sympathized with him, for he had labored hard for the last two years to convince the Senate he had never stolen anything, but he didn't want to sit there indefinitely just to listen to Leslie's lamentations about the land commission. Leslie had that morning made a confession, and he was gladto see it, for that was one step toward repentance. Leslie had talked about the newspapers lying about him, but he couldn't help that. Virginia, jumped into the arena and "wanted to know, you know, about this thing." He seemed to ignore, with that high and loity contempt for everything parliamentary that characterizes the senator from Brooklyn, the fact that Nash's motion had been carried and the vote announced, and he proceeded with a lively and demonstrative argument upon the question. He allowed that there were some things the Republican party could do, but there were some others that they couldn't afford to do, and this was one of them. They couldn't afford, after all this slime and muss and mixture had been stirred up, to stiffe the whole matter by one vote as was then proposed. Mr. Whittemore then proceeded to complete the discomfiture of the senator from Brooklyn. He said he always had liked that speech of Leslie's; it was a good speech, and he had heard him repeat it, for the last three years at least, but he didn't want him to act as his father contessor, nor to interpret his thoughts or actions. He was of age and able to do that himself, if he were not quite as wise as the lockey of Barnwell. The proposition was to indefinitely postpone the consideration of the investigating committee's report, and the Governor's message in reply thereto, and he had sustained the proposition because he knew that articles of impeachment were coming before the Senate from the other. House, and if the tenate were to adopt the committee's report, with all their charges sgainst the Governor, treasurer, &c., it would be prejudging their case. The Senate would stulling itself and disqualify itself from sitting as a high court of impeachment. In the House this morning the only business of importance beyond that already telegraphed was as follows:

Mr. Crews introduced a bill to regulate the responsibility of parties holding collaterals as security for loans. It provides that every corporation or individual who shall make loans as considerals or any negotiable paper shall return the said collaterals upon the tender of payment by the borrower, provided that such loan shall have arrived at maturity, and upon failure to do so the owner of the collateral shall have an action at law and recover the value of such collaterals at their market value.

Mr. Taylor introduced a bill to regulate the per diem and mileage of members, which provides for a reduction of the pay from six dollars to five dollars per diem and the mileage from twenty to twelve cents per mile.

Jones introduced Captain Hendricks's metropolitan police bill, from which it would appear that that officer of unhappy memory, after having in vain offered his bill of abominations to every member of the Charleston delegation, has at last found a representative from the rural districts who is contemptible enough to serve his purposes. The bill was hurledly referred to the committee on military affairs, instead of the committee on the indiciary where it belonged, and was carefully concealed from the sight of the Charleston corresponden's. It is understood, however, that the bill, as offered by Captain Henfully concealed from the sight of the Charleston corresponden's. It is understood, however, that the bill, as offered by Captain Hendricks, is vague and indefinite in all its provisions, except those that regulate the discipline and government of the force, which are copied from the Metropolitan laws of Ohio and New York. It only applies to Charleston County, the County of Richland, which was in the bill, having been erased. The bill was accompanied by a bogus petition praying its passage, and purporting to be signed by a couple of hundred colored men in Charleston; but the signatures are palpable forgeries. The names are evidently fictilious, and are written in pencil, and apparontly by one hand, with very feeble attempts to disguise the similarity of chirography. Altogether, it is a curlosity of literature with which Disraeli's famous collection could hold no comparison.

-Who and What They Are-The Extent of Their Power-What May be Expected by Baltimore and the South.

The Baltimore Gazette has given the following extended, though not very definite, description of the reported operations of Baltimore capitalists in Southern railroads: We have from time to time alluded to the

We have from time to time alluded to the purchase or lease of Southern roads by parties in close connection with the Pennsylvania. Central. For a time it was believed that these operations were being made for the benefit of that road. Some months ago we discovered that this organization, under which this Southern consolidation was being effected, was an independent one, and we tary heretofore been restrained by prudential mostives from speaking on the subject. Now that the system has attained proportions which make further secrecy unnecessary, we give to the public details which will be of unusual interest. usual interest.

Some four years ago the great body of the Southern railroads being still in a more or less dilapidated condition from the wear and tear of an exhausting war, their stocks and mortgage bonds being in a very depressed condition, their means and credit being imited, and their co-operative organization not only incomplete, but checked by the antagonism of special interests and narrow views, a movement was inaugurated by Mr. W. T. onism of special interests and narrow views, a movement was inaugurated by Mr. W. T. Walters, of this city, which he believed would not only yield a large profit to initial and his associates on money invested, but benefit the City of Baltimore by adding greatly to its trade. It seemed, indeed, evident that wompact organization of the great lines of Southern intercommunication, under a system controlled by one head, that it full working. Southern intercommunication, under a system controlled by one head, kept in full working order, thoroughly equipped, with regular and speedy pas-enger and ireight trains running at the lowest paying figures, must necessarily improve the condition of the whole Southern country, and lead consequently to the development of this, its natural and most important market.

Mr. Walters has been joined in this enter-prise by our fellow-townsmen, Messrs. Alex. Brown & Sons, General O'Donnell and Messrs. Thomas C. Jenkins, Horace Abbett, Thomas; Kensett, George Bartlett and B. F. Newcomer. Mesars. M. K. Jesup & Co., D. Willis-James and Hoosevelt & Son, of New York; Drexel & Co., Mesars. M. K. Jesup & Co., D. Willis James and Roosevelt & Son., of New York; Drexel & Co., P. A. & S. Small and Whitney & Sons, of Fennsylvania, and Daniel James of Liverpool, are also associated with it. Over seven mililion dollars have already been expended in actual cash outlay, and up to the present ilms, by purchase of stock, a controlling imagerity in a number of mest important lines of railread, comprising in all one thousand four hindred and swenty-five miles, has been secured. Besides this, control has been obtained under lease of three hundred and sixty-three miles additional. These combinations already comprise complete lines from Richmond, via Daniville and Charlotte to Atlanta; Richmond, via Weldon and Winnington to Charleston and Augusta; and from Atlanta, via Knoxville to Bristol, from which a connection will, in, all probability, be made with Danville by General Flournoy's road, which will be constructed.

Additional roads have been built, and all are, or are being put, in first-class working order and thoroughly equipped.

It will thus be seen that this Rew company now controls both the main lines south from Richmond, the North Carolina roads, the chief roads of South Carolina, two main roads in Georgia, and the important lines, of Tennessee, These combined Southern lines will chief roads of South Carolina, two main roads in Georgia, and the important lines, of Tennessee. These combined Southern lines will have direct communication north of Richmond with Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York, both through the present lines and by others to be built in friendly, alliance with the new organization.

The programme will be complete within two years, when facilities for freight traffic and passenger communication will be afforded the entire South that will not only be simply univalled, but cannot be provided by any competing interest at less than double the outlay of this company, as control of these roads have been obtained at an average cost of about finy cents in the dollar on the original cost in times of gold currency and cheap labor: Baltimes of gold currency and cheap labor. Bal-timore will have complete communication with the whole South by lines of railroads two hundred miles nearer than New York. At'anta will be placed in direct communication with this city by a route one hundred miles shorter than any existing one, and passenger trains will traverse the entire distance, six hundred will traverse the entire distance, six nunder and fifty miles, in less than twenty-four hours, upon the final completion of the Charlotte and Atlanta link, to be finished within eight months. It follows, as a matter of course, that the enterprise of this new organization cannot stop here. From Chattanooga and Atlanta it it is but a railroad step to New Organs and Mobile.

The great benefit to be derived by the South from a thorough organization of a complete system of foads under one management; fully equipped, and free from the annoyances of local interference, must be apparent to every one. Such a system must tend to develop immensely those great home interests, agriculture and manufactures, upon which the very vitality, indeed we may almost say existence, of the South now depends. To Baltimore the advantages of economical transportation and cheap travel must be very great. We shall thus be thrown into more intimate business and personal communication with those with whom we are allied by common sympathy, and with whom, we have always contended, our most important commercial interests are whom we are allied by common sympathy, and with whom, we have always contended, our most important commercial interests are inseparably united. There is no risk in predicting that, in the staple article of extronalone, the receipts in this qity for the first year after the final completion of communication with the leading business centres of the South, will be increased fully three hundred thousand bales. There will not only be a vast increase of receipts from the South, but there must necessarily be an enormous edition to the supplies shipped to the South, Baltimore will not only become a large exporting mart, but its foreign importations must of necessity growwery largely.

For prudenilal reasons we forbear for the present giving further facts in regard to the negotiations now in progress, which will add greatly to the magnitude of this enterprise. We will only add that the organization which controls these operations is in no way connected with the Pennsylvania Central. It is necessarily a most dangerous competitor for the Baltimore and Ohlo Road, its notime nected with the Pennsylvania Central. It is necessarily a most dangerous competitor for the Baltimore and Ohio Road, its prime movers having had the sagacky and the tact to obtain quietly most important leading communications, from which our State Road is now absolutely cut off. Baltimore is at least to be comprehilated upon the fact that no to be congratulated upon the fact that, no matter what else may be said of it, it has grown great enough to sustain more than two considerable railroad enterprises.
